47th BOMBARDMENT WING, LIGHT
OFFICE OF THE COMMANDING OFFICER

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE 47TH BOMBARDMENT WING AND THEIR FAMILIES

I wish to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to all of you for the excellent work you are doing, either directly for the 47th Bombardment Wing or in support of it.

Doubtless, in years to come, you will recall with a chuckle the humorous and unusual events of your tour at Sculthorpe rather than the several hardships and misfortunes which we have undergone both as a unit and as individuals. As you riffle through the pages of this pictorial, I hope your thoughts will turn to the dartboard in the village "local" and the fact that English beer was not so bad after all.

I'm sure you will also remember the important task which was performed here in support of the NATO forces and the essential role we played in the preservation of a free world.

As time rolls on, wherever your pursuit of success and happiness takes you, in the military or civilian life, I hope your memory of Sculthorpe and the 47th Bombardment Wing will be one of warmth and fondness.

Sincerely,

DAVID M. JONES
Colonel, USAF
Commander

COLONEL DAVID M. JONES
Commander

Colonel David M. Jones, a veteran of fifteen years of active service, received a commission as Second Lieutenant in May 1936, following his graduation from the University of Arizona.

Rated a command pilot, he has attended both the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and the Armed Forces College at Norfolk, Virginia.

During World War II he served in two different theaters of operations.

During April, May and June 1942 he was in the China–Burma–India Theater where he participated as a flight commander in the famous " Doolittle Project ", the first bombing of Japan proper.

As a squadron commander, and later as a group commander, the Colonel served in the 319th Bomb Group in the European Theater from September 1942 until April 1945.

Colonel Jones, a prisoner of war for thirty months, was liberated by allied forces in May 1945.

From mid 1948 to August of 1950, Colonel Jones was Director of War Plans, Tactical Air Command, and until September of last year was Assistant Deputy for Operations, Ninth Air Force.

At that time he was made commander of the 47th Bomb Group. The Colonel was assigned to his present post in February of last year.

For his war time service, he has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross with one Oak Leaf Cluster, the Air Medal, the Purple Heart, and a Chinese medal known as the Hun Hwei.

COLONEL GALEN B. PRICE

Deputy Commander

A native of Modesto, California, Colonel Price is a Regular Air Force Officer with over twelve years' active service. Graduating from La Verne College, Pomona, California in 1938, he enlisted in the Army Air Corps Cadets during June 1940, and graduated a Second Lieutenant pilot. After spending the first part of his career in Texas, he was assigned in 1945 to the Air Transport Command on Guam and travelled to the far corners of the Pacific. After the ATC was reorganized into the Military Air Transport Service, he became Chief of Operations until 1949.

Reassigned to the States, he spent a few months at Barksdale Field, Louisiana and Lubbock, Texas. He was then assigned to Langley Air Force Base in August 1950 as Wing A–3. In February of last year, he was placed in command of the 47th Bomb Group (L). Shortly afterwards the Colonel was appointed to the post of Executive Officer of the Wing.

Day Birds Of 47th Bomb Group Turn Night Hawks To Blast Germans

By Sgt. TOM McRAE
Staff Correspondent

WITH THE 47TH BOMB GROUP, Feb. 15—When this A-20 unit shifted several months ago from low level day attacks in formation to night raids from medium altitude by lone aircraft, it became the first American bomb group in the Mediterranean Theater to operate exclusively at night.

Veterans of 25 months of combat flying against the enemy, from Kasserine Pass to the Brenner, 47th now operates under a new set of flying conditions. While previously on day runs, pilots expected flak and occasional fighters over vital targets, they now find weather the toughest foe, particularly ice-and low ceilings which may close in to obscure home and nearby fields while they are out on missions, forcing them to bail out or crash land.

Although night flying is hard on a new pilot, putting him directly on his own as contrasted with day operations in which he can be broken in gradually, a room full of pilots and bombardiers are divided on the relative merits of day versus night missions. One view expressed was that while by day you sweated out only a few minutes in the target area, as night flying most of your instruments and oxygen mask at the time you were under a constant strain.

NIGHT PREFERRED

On the other hand, Lt. Col. Harry Willard of Vista, Calif., group operations officer, a veteran of 91 missions who commanded this unit's first night mission on 30 January, said that night operations are safer than daylight operations. "At briefings, where you learn what targets are assigned specific flights, others are roving assignments. Wing History

From the time of its pre-war activation on January 15 1941, the 47th, now designated a Bombardment Wing, has had an impressive and colorful record that is difficult to match.

The 47th Bombardment Group came into being at McChord Field, Tacoma, Washington, with the original personnel and methods of operation adopted from the 17th Bombardment Group, ancestor of many other similar groups during that period.

The first known Commanding Officer, Lieutenant Colonel Robbin A. Day, was succeeded by Lieutenant Colonel Hilbert M. Whitkopt, who led the organization in its first hectic days of attaining equipment and adequate personnel.

Assigned to the 2nd Air Force during its West Coast stay, the 84th, 85th, 86th, and 97th Squadrons comprising the Group were flying B–18s and B–23s. In August of 1941, their first of many moves took them to Hammer Field, Fresno, California. At that time each squadron had but to B–18s and two Pt–19s. When the Japanese struck at Pearl Harbor, December 7 1941, all the B-18s were assigned to the 85th Squadron. The 97th received all the B–24s and LB30s that could be mustered for sub-patrol over the Pacific Coast, and the 85th moved to McClellan Field to fly sub-chasing missions.

On January 15 1942, the entire organization received the new A–20 aircraft, and the Command was assumed by Major Frederick R. Terrell. The unit moved to Will Rogers Field, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, during the middle of February, and began extensive low-level bombing and strafing exercises. A cadre was formed about this time for the 311th Bomb Group.

July 15 found the Group on the move again, this time to Greensboro, North Carolina, to participate in the Carolina maneuvers. One month later Major Terrell was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel. After the completion of the maneuvers, the organization was equipped with the newest versions of the A–20 and B–20. The 47th was combat ready; orders were received, and the advance echelon arrived in England on September 15, landing at a field near Bury St. Edmunds. On October 15 the remainder of the unit moved to Fort Dix, New Jersey, for the ocean voyage; however, the main echelon departing on November 2 was ordered to North Africa instead of England, where the rest of the unit had set up headquarters. After landing at North Africa a fraction of the main body armed themselves with rifles and participated as foot soldiers at the invasion of Port Lyauty. The remainder of the water echelon that had been en route to England was diverted and also ordered to North Africa, landing at Casablanca. There, they began to establish a base of operations at Medina Air Field, fifteen miles south of Casablanca, and shortly afterwards were joined by the flight and advance echelon that had been in England. By November 25 all components were assembled at Medina, except the rear body, which reported in later. After completing a short phase of orientation flying, the 86th Squadron moved to Youks-les-Bains, and immediately flew their first combat mission on December 16 1942. On January 6 1943, the 85th and 97th Squadrons moved to Thelea, Tunisia, and the 84th moved to join the 86th.

On February 1 Lieutenant Colonel Terrell was promoted to full Colonel, and by this time all units were flying combat, receiving their christening at Kasserine Pass, where they flew a mission every seven minutes for the last two days of the February 15 through 19 battle. For carrying out its task there " . . . with such devastating effect that it turned the enemy back in full retreat . . .", the Group was awarded its first Distinguished Unit Citation by the War Department. Needless to say, there was hardly an aircraft that did not suffer major battle damage. During this battle the 85th and 97th Squadrons had to pull out of Thelea as the Germans were moving in. By February 25 all units were reassembled at Canrobert, Algeria, and operated out of there until mid-April.

In April, Souk-el-Arba, in Northern Algeria, was the next stop for the Group, and it was about this time that the organization began most of its operational flying at mid-altitudes. All sorties were flown from Souk-el-Arba for the remainder of the North African Campaign. Colonel Terrell was assigned to higher headquarters and Lieutenant Colonel Green, Jr., assumed command.

On June 4 the move was completed to Solom, east of Tunis on the Cap Bon Peninsula, and from there began the bombing of the Italian possession of Lampadusa and surrounding islands.

During the Sicilian invasion, aircraft operated out of Malta to aid the invading forces, and three days after D-Day moved on to the island itself. From Sicily, they helped cover the Salerno invasion, and on September 2 1943 moved to the Italian mainland near Torento. This was the first Allied bombardment unit on the Continent of Europe.

In the latter part of September, the organization moved to Foggia to operate until January 1 1944. It then moved to a field just south of Naples, flying from there until Mount Vesuvius erupted, necessitating a move to a small field two miles north of Naples.

Bombing missions remained at medium altitude, and the organization borrowed an R.A.F. Bombardier, some equipment and trained personnel to handle the job. Enlisted men were used to operate the borrowed Mark 8 sights, and it is reported that one of the hottest was a radio operator. It was not until the middle of 1944 that stateside commissioned bombardiers began to arrive.

Grossetto, Italy was the next stop before moving on to Corsica during the first part of August. Prior to the departure from Grossetto, the unit began night-intruder operations as well as day missions. Second Lieutenant H. J. McGee of the 85th Squadron flew the first mission of that type in the 47th. From Corsica Lieutenant McGee led the Group on a mission directed against the German Headquarters Installation of Southern France on D-Day. The attack, co-ordinated with paratroopers, has been credited with disrupting the entire German defense system in Southern France.

After the push into France, the 47th moved from Corsica into La Jassa, and began supporting rapidly advancing P-47 units with fuel and bombs.

In the latter part of September the unit returned to Grossetto, flying solely night-intruder missions, and during January, new A-26s, now known as the B-26s, replaced the battle-weary 20s. Throughout the heat of the Po Valley campaign the unit flew not only night-intruder missions, but around-the-clock missions.

In March, Colonel Green was transferred and Lieutenant Colonel Kenneth S. Wade assumed command.

During this time of continued action, there were many crews who did not return. However, there are no records at our disposal at present to give the actual count, or the names of those who gave their lives heroically for the preservation of freedom.

After two years and ten months of constant combat duty the Group was rotated to the Zone of Interior, moving into Seymour Johnson Field, Goldsboro, North Carolina, on June 26 1945. Awaiting them there were a newer version of the A–26, a scheduled thirty day training program to prepare the unit for the Pacific Theater, and a transfer to Okinawa. Before the program could be completed the long awaited V-J day was announced to the world.

Colonel Wade, promoted in the first part of the year, released the organization to Colonel Marvin S. Zipp, who moved with the 47th to Lake Charles, Louisiana.

It was while stationed at Lake Charles that the Group lost the 97th Bomb Squadron, and later in 1949, when the Wing was inactivated, the 86th. At Lake Charles, two new Commanders were added to the list, Colonel Robert J. Hughey, in the first part of 1946, and in October of the same year, Colonel Gerald E. Williams. During the month of October the unit moved to Biggs Field, El Paso, Texas. Until the 47th moved to Barksdale Air Force Base in November of 1948, three other Commanders held temporary commands before Colonel Willis F. Chapman assumed command responsibilities.

In March of 1949, the B-45 four-engined jet light bomber, the " Tornado ", replaced the B-26 as the organization's tactical aircraft. On October 2 1949, the 47th Bombardment Wing (redesignated under the Wing Base Plan of 1948) was inactivated at Barksdale Air Force Base under the austerity program. During this period of inactivation, the 84th and 85th Bomb Squadrons were retained on active duty and assigned to the 363rd Tactical Reconnaissance Wing at Langley Air Force Base. Upon reactivation of the 47th Bombardment Wing, on March 12 1951, these squadrons rejoined the parent organization. Colonel Willis F. Chapman was placed in command, and the unit remained at Langley Air Force Base under the Base Wing Plan. Later command was assigned to Colonel Charles D. Jones.

While at Langley, the 47th continued to develop air-crew proficiency with the B-45 aircraft. In the spring of 1952, it departed for the present station, the movement being made in four echelons—forward, main, air, and rear.

The organization now stationed at APO 22 is a member of the NATO family and commanded by Colonel David M. Jones.

(At this time the Publishers thank C.W.O. Morris Elder for presenting most of the information about the 47th's past history, for he has been with the organization since activation, except for a five months' absence in 1945. Major Henry J. McGee, presently Operations Officer of the 85th Bomb Squadron, is the Second Lieutenant referred to in the body of the history. These two men are the only remaining members of the OLD 47th.)

THE FLOOD

AMERICAN WINS THE GM

An American airman who swam through raging flood waters to save women and children in the East Coast floods last January has been awarded the George Medal.

He was one of five Americans presented with awards for gallantry during the floods by the Home Secretary, Sir David Maxwell Fyfe.

The George Medallist is Staff-Sergt. Freeman Kilpatrick, from Alabama.

When flood tides were threatening to engulf his house at Hunstanton, Norfolk, he went out into the storm " without regard for his own safety, to warn others."

" He swam in the raging waters and debris," says the citation, and rescued eighteen people.

" Through his efforts other families were able to escape while he and his family were forced to suffer the worst of the storm."

Operational Headquarters, 49th Air Division

BRIGADIER GENERAL JOHN D. STEVENSON

Commander of the 49th Air Division

Brigadier General John D. Stevenson, a native of Laramie, Wyoming, was graduated from the US Military Academy in 1937. On graduation he entered the Army Air Force Flying School, completing this training in October 1938. During World War II he commanded a fighter-bomber group in the European Theater of Operations until he became a prisoner of war in early 1943. Following his return to the ZI in April 1945 he served as Assistant Chief of Staff; Operations; Tactical Air Command; IG for Airways and Air Communications Service; Chief of Plans Division for MATS; Chief Atomic Energy Division; and Headquarters USAF from which he assumed his present post as Commander of the 49th Air Division. He was graduated from the Air War College in 1948. His decorations include:

Legion of Merit; Distinguished Flying Cross; Air Medal (two Oak Leaf Clusters); Purple Heart (two Oak Leaf Clusters); British D.F.C.

COLONEL HAROLD N. HOLT

Deputy Commander of the 49th Air Division

Colonel Harold N. Holt, a native of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and a graduate of Drexel Institute of Technology, received his commission in the Officer Reserve Corps in June 1939. He completed pilot training in January 1942. Upon completion of flight training he served as Operations Officer of a fighter squadron in the Canal Zone until March 1943. During World War II he commanded the 366th Fighter Group and served as Director of Operations, Headquarters Tactical Air Command in the European Theater of Operations. Returning to the ZI in August 1945, he served successively as Deputy, and then Base Commander of Lubbock Air Force Base and Assistant Director of Operations, Headquarters Ninth Air Force, Biggs Field, Texas. He was integrated in the Regular Air Force in 1947. He received his MBA degree in Industrial Management from the University of Pennsylvania in 1949. He later held various assignments in Headquarters USAF under the Deputy Chiefs of Staff for Materiel and Development. He was Deputy Director of Procurement and Engineering, Headquarters USAF, prior to assuming his present post as Deputy Commander of the 49th Air Division. His decorations include :

Silver Star, Distinguished Flying Cross, Bronze Star, Air Medal (27 Oak Leaf Clusters), Distinguished Unit Citation, French Croix de Guerre with Palme, Belgian Fourregere.

History of the 49th Air Division

The 49th Air Division is a unique unit in the world-wide Air Force. Upon activation on November 7 1951, at Langley Air Force Base, Virginia, under Tactical Air Command, through its early training phases and departure for overseas May 21 1951, until reaching its present level of readiness, this organization has been required to accept and to resolve a myriad of problems incidental to pioneering in a new tactical field. Chief among these unusual jobs has been the molding of a completely new, self-sufficient task force with a new tactical mission. It has long been the aim of Air Force planners to have a tactical air unit composed of different types of aircraft, each type capable of dual or combined mission accomplishments. While the full capability cannot be exercised during training periods, it has become evident, during all our maneuvers, that a devastating potentiality has been developed.

Personnel assigned to Division Headquarters have purposely been kept to a minimum. Operational aspects have been elevated to a level of primary consideration in all unit activities. Additional duties are the rule rather than the exception for our officers and airmen, thus providing a helpfully taut utilization of highly trained manpower.

Since activation to the time of publishing this record, the units of the division have participated in more than twenty varied operational exercises and maneuvers. Most of these exercises were of a combined nature employing all types of combat aircraft. This record of accomplishment indicates the resourcefulness and state of readiness of the Division units.

The combat wings and varied support units that compose this Division have accomplished much. They are the executors of a developed operational plan. Without their ready and willing cooperation this entire Division would be an Air Force unit without distinction.

47th Maintenance and Supply Group

COLONEL WARD W. MARTINDALE
Commander

Colonel Ward W. Martindale, Commander of the 47th Maintenance and Supply Group, was graduated from Indiana University in 1940 and was commissioned in May 1942 after completing Aviation Cadet training. His assignments while in the Zone of the Interior consisted of Squadron Executive Officer and Squadron Commander of the 49th Troop Carrier Squadron.

In April 1943, he was deployed to the European-African-Middle Eastern Theater of Operations where he distinguished himself in nine major campaigns and flew 958 combat hours. Subsequent to the invasion of North Africa, he participated in every airborne operation in the EAME theater until the end of the war. In recognition thereof, he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters and the Croix de Guerre. His group received two president citations and was awarded the French Forragerre in Color of Croix de Guerre.

Upon returning to the Zone of the Interior he was assigned to Headquarters Tactical Air Command where he was Director of Military Personnel and integrated into the Regular Air Force in July 1946.

After attending the Air Command and Staff School, he returned to Headquarters Tactical War Plans Division. After two years he was re-assigned to Headquarters, Continental Air Command, where for twenty-one months he was Chief of TAC Plans, Director of Plans, and Chief of the War Plans Division. In March 1952, Colonel Martindale assumed command of the 47th Maintenance and Supply Group.

Group History

The 47th Maintenance and Supply Group, comprising Group Headquarters, 47th Maintenance Squadron, 47th Motor Vehicle Squadron, and 47th Supply Squadron, was activated at Langley Air Force Base, Virginia, on March 12 1951. The specific mission of this group is to furnish Field Maintenance, Supply, and Transportation in support of the 47th Bombardment Wing, Light. In addition it is charged with the responsibility of the following base functions: Commercial Transportation, Commissary Sales Store, Clothing Sales Store, Base Petroleum Section, Salvage, and Reclamation.

Upon activation it immediately assumed these duties at Langley Air Force Base, Virginia with additional responsibility for logistical support of several attached units. It continued in this role until February of 1952 and though the many tasks remained the same, key personnel were screened and divided equally in order to activate the 4430th Maintenance and Supply Group, which was to assume base functions upon the assignment of the 47th Bomb. Wing, Light, to its overseas destination —England.

After arrival in England, the Group's TO & E was confronted with the duties of readying the base and its facilities for the support of the tactical units along with logistical support for seventeen satellite units. A major project that required immediate attention was the processing of all TAT property and equipment from the port at Southampton to the RAF Station, Sculthorpe.

In addition to the support of units organic to the Wing, the Group expended considerable effort in improving the existing field facilities and relocating and rewarehousing the base supply activity.

47th Air Base Group

LIEUTENANT COLONEL JAMES S. KALE

Commander

Lieutenant Colonel James S. Kale, a veteran of twelve years' service, is a native of Everson, Washington.

Graduating from flying school as a second lieutenant in April 1941, he was immediately assigned to Clark Field in the Philippines. The Colonel was serving with the 19th Bomb Group on December 7 1941. In one of the last Groups to evacuate the islands, he departed from Mindanao and went to Towsville, Australia, where he joined the 22nd Bomb Group and flew twenty-seven combat missions in the B–26 Marauder.

Rotated home in May 1943, Colonel Kale was assigned to the 3rd Air Force in a training group and served at Lake Charles, Louisiana and Marianna, Florida until May of 1945. Departing again for the Pacific, he flew the A-26 Invader for thirteen more missions, this time from Okinawa. Upon cessation of hostilities, he returned to the States. Colonel Kale then attended the University of Washington where he received a BA degree.

He arrived at Biggs Air Force Base, Texas, in 1947 and was assigned to the 47th Bombardment Wing. He has served as Squadron Operations Officer, Squadron Commander, Group Operations Officer, Wing Operations Officer, and recently assumed command of the 47th Air Base Group. He was graduated from the Air Command and Staff School, Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama in December 1948.

Group History

The 47th Air Base Group was originally activated at Biggs Field, Texas, in October 1947, as one of the support groups for the 47th Bombardment Wing, Light.

The Wing moved to Barksdale Field, Louisiana, in November 1948, and was inactivated there on October 2 1949.

The 47th Air Base Group, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Frank J. Siebenaler, was again activated with the Wing on March 12 1951, at Langley Air Force Base, Virginia.

Preparation for an overseas movement became the primary objective in the latter part of 1951, and in May 1952 the Group transferred with the Wing from Langley Air Force Base to its present station, APO 22. The present Group Commander, Lieutenant Colonel James S. Kale, assumed command of the Group on February 25 1953.

Under the Wing-Base plan, the 47th Air Base Group, in its role as a support group for the 47th Bombardment Wing, Light, is responsible for the accomplishment of those house-keeping services and functions generally associated with the operation and administration of the Base. To accomplish its mission, the 47th Air Base Group is organized with five squadrons: Headquarters and Headquarters Squadron, 47th Air Police Squadron, 47th Communications Squadron, 47th Food Service Squadron, and 47th Installations Squadron.

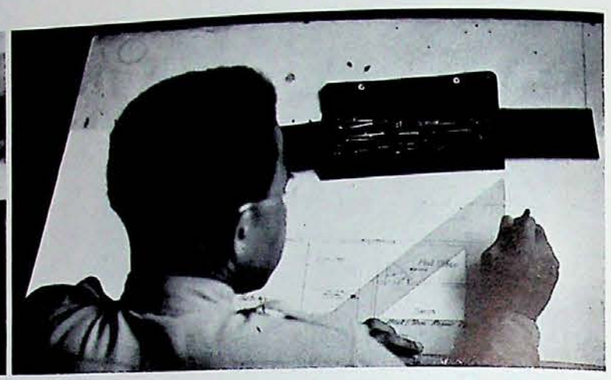
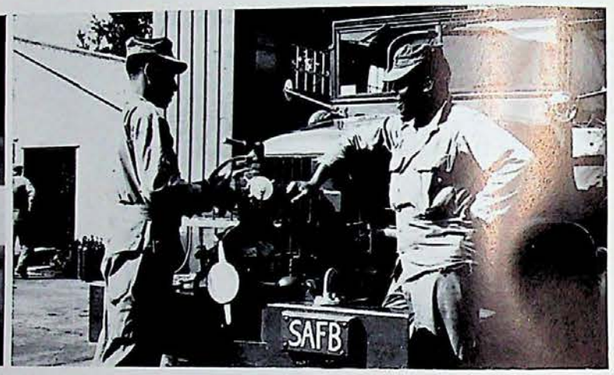
Capt. Jones is startled

And it comes out here



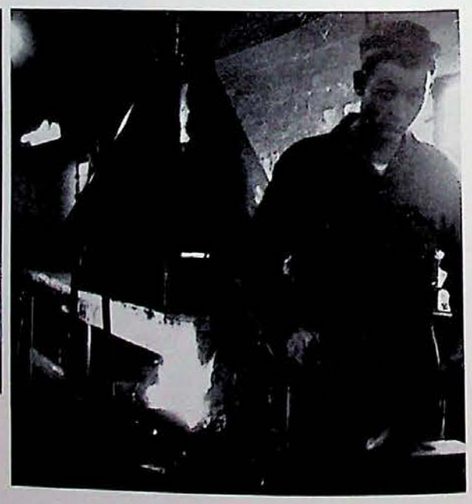
On the planning board

"It's cold"



The fire was under control in minutes

"The thinkers"



The anvil chorus

Cleanliness is next to Godliness

Everybody gets hungry

Sitting pretty

Now a pinch of pepper and a pound or so of salt

Really up a pole

They're off

Looking toward the PX from telephone exchange

They're on

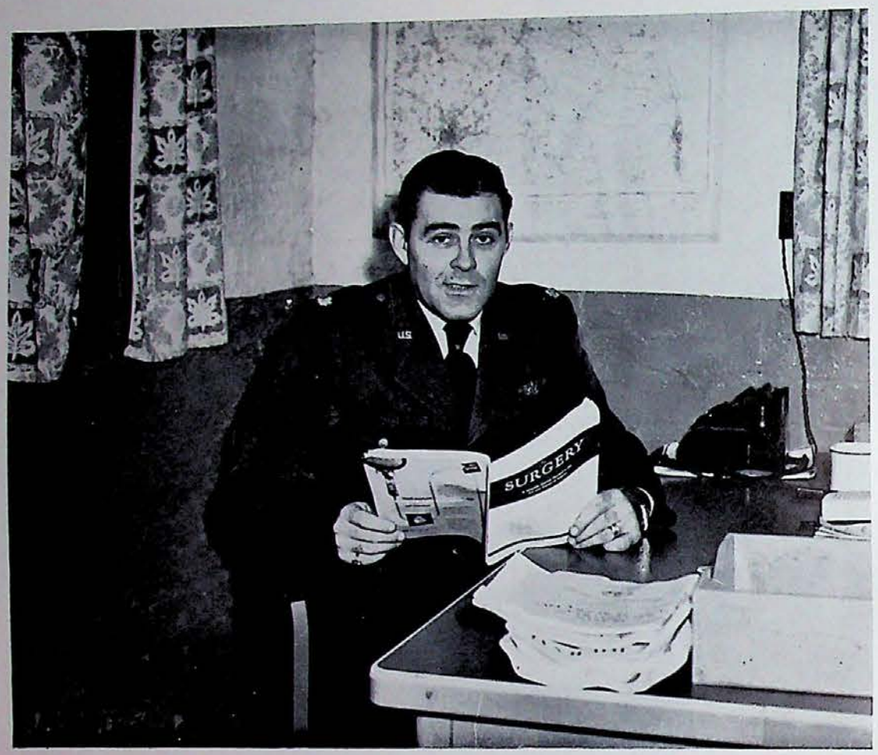
BASE SCHOOL

47th Medical Group



MAJOR BENJAMIN N. HAMMERS

Commander

Major Benjamin N. Hammers was born at Banning, Pennsylvania, April 4 1918, and spent his early years in the western part of the state attending primary and secondary schools at Correllsville. Following graduation from high school he attended college at New Concord, Ohio, graduating with a Bachelor of Science Degree in 1938. In 1943 he received his MD from the Temple University Medical School and spent the following ten months in practical training in the University Hospitals of Pittsburg.

The Major entered active military service with the Army in January of 1944 and after attending field service school at Carlisle Barracks, was assigned to duty with the combat ground forces of the 75th Infantry Division, 3rd Battalion, 290th Infantry Regiment. He accompanied these troops through the Rhineland, Ardennes, and Central Europe Campaigns and then became evacuation officer for Western Base Section, ETO until April 1946. For his participation he was awarded the Bronze Star, Army Commendation Ribbon, ETO and three combat stars, Combat Medic Badge and the Meritorious Unit Plaque X-2.

After separation at Fort Dix in June 1946 he entered private practice and remained until May 1950 at which time he became a Regular Air Force MD. He attained his Flight Surgeon's designation the same year.

After graduation as a Flight Surgeon he was assigned the primary duty of Chief of Aviation Medicine at Langley Field. He remained in that capacity until May 1952 when he became Commander of the 47th Medical Group.

Medical History

The 47th Medical Group emerged as a combat unit in early February 1952. Authorization had been received from Headquarters USAF providing a TO & E, composed of 61 airmen and 13 officers. The mission of the unit is to provide complete medical care for the elements of the 47th Bombardment Wing, Light, attached units, and dependent personnel assigned to APO 22.

Great strides have been made by the group since its arrival in May 1952. The station hospital, which was then a twenty bed dispensary, has now been expanded to a fifty bed unit. Immediately upon arrival, a TDA request was submitted to higher headquarters to augment the authorized TO so that more efficient medical care could be provided. Approval was received thereby increasing overall effectiveness and efficiency.

Because of the inadequacy of the physical plant to cope with the increased number of personnel, plans for new construction were submitted in July 1952. After months of deliberation and alterations, approval was received from higher headquarters in early Spring 1953. The new construction will provide additional wards, an operating room, an OB ward, pharmacy, diet kitchen and a laboratory. To date, foundations for two wards have been laid and it is expected that the final completion date will be in the vicinity of July 1955.

Mess facilities for hospital patients, in particular those on special diets, presented another important problem. Food had to be transported from the airmen's consolidated mess hall by vehicle and was, of course, cold and generally unpalatable when served. As a result of this situation, a request for the conversion into a mess hall, of a building adjacent to the hospital was submitted and approved. The official opening took place on September 1 1953.

In addition to the above, other minor achievements have been made from time to time to assist in maintaining a smoothly running organization, and efforts are constantly being put forth to continue the policy of offering complete, efficient medical care.

Headquarters, 39th AAA Battalion

LIEUTENANT COLONEL FRANK D. PRYOR, JR.
Commanding Officer

Lieutenant Colonel Frank D. Pryor, Jr. was born in San Francisco, California, February 11 1916 and graduated from Lowell High School, San Francisco in 1932. After attending the George Washington University, Washington, D.C., he continued his studies and received his Bachelor of Science Degree in Forestry from the University of California in 1939.

His first military assignment, in 1940, was serving as a battery officer with the 65th Coast Artillery Battery, Fort Scott, San Francisco. In 1941 he was transferred to the Hawaiian Area Command and duty with the 98th in the 95th Coast Artillery, before eventually assuming S-3 and G-3 duties.

Lieutenant Colonel Pryor was at Pearl Harbor on December 7 1941, when the Japanese struck. Since then he has served in many different capacities and assignments from the Hawaiian Islands to England, and on the fourteenth of July this year he took over command of the 39th AAA Battalion.

Although his fourteen years of active service have kept him on the go, he still finds time to belong to the Kappa Alpha Fraternity, Sons of the American Revolution, El Paso Lodge No. 130 (AF and AM Masons), and the National Sojourners.

Battalion History

The 39th AAA Battalion was activated on the 15th of January 1949, at Fort Bliss, Texas. Its roots stem from the 168th Company, Coast Artillery Corps, dating back to 1907 at Fort Monroe, Virginia, and the 788th AAA Battalion, from which the present Battalion was designated on October 13 1948. The 788th gained fame in World War II in Antwerp, Belgium when it engaged the Nazi " Buzz-Bombs ", destroying 48 of them on the day of November 28 1944.

The unit arrived at this station on February 9 1951 under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Nyles W. Baltzer. In August of that year Colonel Baltzer was succeeded by Lieutenant Colonel Peter J. Lacey, who commanded the Battalion until his departure for the Zone of Interior in July 1953. Lieutenant Colonel Frank D. Pryor than assumed command.

There were many hardships in the early days as the unit organized, trained, and integrated personnel into an operational organization for performing its mission of defending the base. An intensified training program, known as operation " Merry-Go-Round " was instituted. Batteries of the Battalion are constantly rotated from their three battery defense to the 32nd AAA Brigade Training Site at Langham Camp. At the Stiffkey Range there, they have attained their record, for the Battalion lives up to its motto of " Hit Hard and Sure ".

A pause for coffee during flood rescue work

"Trophies all around" was the keynote at Sculthorpe recently when organization captains gathered with the trophies which their teams have won during the past sports season. Left to right: Capt. Jack Frost, Third Air Force Tennis Team Champions; Capt. Lindsay Morris, 47th Food Service Sq., Runners-Up National League Baseball Championship; Colonel Galen B. Price, Deputy Commander 47th Bomb. Wing, holding 47th Motor Vehicle Sq.'s Third Air Force Softball Chamiponship Cup; and Capt. Albert L. Neyhard, 47th Motor Vehicle Sq., with their trophy for Runners-Up in the U.K. Softball Tournament
